Introduction

From its beginnings in the late 1700s the town of Etobicoke continued up the chain of importance from a township incorporated in 1850 to eventually becoming part of the City of Toronto in 1954. It has continued to grow, being part of Greater Toronto in 1998 currently having a population of well over 300, 000 inhabitants.

This little book looks at another aspect of the community, that being marriage. Of much less importance in the 21st century, the institution of family and its' beginning–the bond of matrimony–were of monumental importance in the 19th century. In a country that needed settlers, each new marriage contract practically guaranteed a revenue of seven to ten children per household. From the early Home District books to later marriage registrations this book shows early pioneers' weddings including those of the founding settlements of Albion, Weston, Mimico and Thistletown.

On a personal note, it is a small but meaningful thank you to a town that well hosted me for over nine months, a place some say is a little quieter, more of a sane and civilized part of Toronto. All the best to you, Etobicoke.

HDMR Home District Marriage Registers:

Information and Online Source Locations

In the times we are examining in this section (1823-1858) Ontario was divided into districts each of which contained counties. Etobicoke, like its neighbour Toronto, belonged to York County which was in the Home District. This concerns the weddings covering the years 1823 to 1858 for our index.

Register of Rev. James Harris (Presbyterian). This register covers baptisms and marriages from 1823 to 1838. Besides the date of marriage, names of the spouses, witnesses names' are given as well as residence of those contracting marriage. No unions from this book were contracted in Etobicoke but a few of the spouses contained herein were residents of Etobicoke. Therefore, any of these entrees found in our index will say of Etobicoke.

Register of Rev. James Harris (Presbyterian). This marriage register has entries that contain whether to marry by license or banns, being single or widowed, witnesses names, and often the signatures of the spouses. As these unions took place at the church in Toronto no marriages were performed in Etobicoke. However, some of those marrying were Etobicoke residents and some of those listings are contained herein.

Home District Marriage Register. In 1831, a law was passed in Ontario whereby all marriages performed by non-Catholic or non-Anglican clergy had to be registered. Such ministers submitted 'returns' of those they had married to the Clerk of the Peace. These were later recorded in district books. The 1831-40 Home District book has entries that have different particulars recorded depending on the whim of the minister. A few items even have dates the banns were published. Some contain only the residence place of the spouses and not where they were married. Some have a place of marriage recorded. Our index in this section is concerned with the latter. The marriages performed in Etobicoke with its communities such as Weston or Albion are contained herein. However, there are a few unions recorded where only places of residence are provided.

OCMR Ontario County Marriage Registers:

Information and Online Source Locations

In 1857 a law was passed in Ontario stating that all marriages in the province had to be registered regardless of religion. As well, all marital unions that had formerly been compiled by District Clerks now came under the jurisdiction of County Clerks of the Peace. These records provide details such as date and place of marriage, names of spouses, parents names and witnesses. Our index is concerned with York County which covers Etobicoke.

Ontario Marriage Registrations 1869-1880:

Information and Some Online Source Locations

In 1869 the Ontario Government passed the Vital Statistics Act which stipulated that all births, marriages and deaths occurring in Ontario had to be registered.

OMR
1869-73

These records were the first series out under the 1869 Vital Statistics Act and are kept at the Archives of Ontario. The registration was done to a Division Registrar within the County. The information was copied onto pages often containing three marriages per page. The particulars recorded include spouses' ages, residence, place of birth, occupations, whether single or widowed, parents names, witnesses to the wedding, minister performing the ceremony and date and place of the event. No registration number was applied to these records.
